WACE EXPERIENTIAL EDUCATION INSTITUTE

NEW DIRECTIONS IN EXP. ED.

The Institute's theme, "New Directions in Exp. Ed.", corresponds to exploring the many innovative ways that colleges and universities are engaging students in experiential learning. The curriculum is blended to cover the more traditional models of internships and cooperative education, as well as to more fully investigate, discuss, and design new strategies, with topics such as: Service-Learning, Multidisciplinary Models of Experiential Learning, Undergraduate Research, Models of Reflection, and International Placements. Specific modules will include: faculty engagement, learning assessment, learning competencies & outcomes, strategies for educational planning, and site development for experiential education.

INSTITUTE TEAMS

The Institute is designed for teams of two to five people. Teams may include faculty members, academic administrators, and experiential education program directors.

DEVELOP YOUR EDUCATIONAL PLANS

The Institute is designed for teams to develop an educational plan that strengthens and/or expands the institution's experiential education portfolio. On the first day of the Institute, teams present their current campus programs, as well as their goals for the week. Team conversations will be facilitated by Institute Faculty Members. On the fifth day of the Institute, teams will present their future plans, followed by discussion and feedback from all Institute participants and faculty.

INSTITUTE FACULTY

The Institute's Program Director is Dr. Richard Porter, Professor and Chair of Mathematics at Northeastern University; and Co-Director is Dr. James Stellar, Vice President for Academic Innovation and Experiential Education at Queens College, CUNY. Other Institute Faculty include 12 experiential education professionals from a variety of academic settings. Additional faculty information can be found here: www.waceinc.org/institute/faculty.html
